Extra Session of Congress. Mr. HALSTEAD threatens the Democrats that though Mr. HARRISON would convene Congress in extra session "with reluctance," yet he may be induced to do so by the refusal of the Democrats to cut down the revenue through tariff revision and reformation without the assassination of the principle of protection, or by their refusal to admit the States ready to come in from the Northwest without coupling with them a Mormon and a Mexican State. The Democrats can dety Mr. HARRISON'S utmost efforts to humiliate the South. He can convene Congress in March, but he cannot give to the Republicans a dangerous mafority in either house.

The Republicans will have in the next House of Representatives not more than seven majority. What can such a majority in a body consisting of 325 members do against the will of a determined minority?

It is, therefore, not their confidence in the Republicans, but in the Democrats that frees the southern people from fears of hostile legislation by Congress. We are glad to believe that so large a minority of the northern people are willing to accord to the southern States their rights under the Constitution; but sorry to know that there are so many the Republican party.

But suppose the Republicans had had confifteen years: What would now be the con-

Is it not strange that there should be found respectable white men living in the southern States who do all they can to reduce their own section of the Union to the condition of a sarrapy? How is it that the people of Virginia should appear to be so nearly equally divided upon this question of preserving their own civilization when the white people of States where the negroes constitute a majority of the population stand together so closely that they always carry those States by a large majority? It is a reflection that is well calculated to produce a sad feeling in the mind of every true Virginian.

An Outspoken Mayor.

Mayor Glend, of Atlanta, Ga., delivered the other day his innovance of a fear on that point.

We haven't a semblance of a fear on that point.

Under its new Republican editor, the next Congress from this district, which was some time are served upon Mr. E. C. Vennic, is in the hands of the printers and will be published in full. Mr. Venable's answer to colonize the negroes in a new Territory or State of their own:

This dictum is so plainly true that it ought not to need to be impressed upon the mind of any citizen of any city. No city should ever surrender to contractors the control of her water-works, or her gas-works, or her public schools. The plea that any one of these three can be more economically or more efficiently managed by private individuals than by public servants is not worthy of a moment's consideration. We trust that the people of Richmond will bear in mind what Mayor GLENN says on this subject, and act upon it whenever they shall be asked to believe that contractors desire to get hold of the city's property in order to make money for the public and not for themselves.

and therefore will do well to deposit what Mayor GLENN says where we can readily lay our hands upon it when it is needed. Here are three more of Mayor GLENN's pithy paragraphs: "We (the Council) have no right to prohibit the liquor traffic. But it is our solemn duty to centrol it." "Neither beer-saloons nor bar-rooms are naticism ever nurse one into greatness."

A perusal of the address is necessary to a correct and clear understanding of the meaning of these three paragraphs. We infer that Mayor GLENN is an advocate of high license; but we may be mistaken in drawing that inference. If the City Council of Atlanta has no right to stop the sale of liquors, but has the right to control the sale, surely the Council's duty is to control it in the interest of the community at large. When he says that it can hardly be claimed that it is the duty of the city authorities to make beer-saloons and bar-rooms "convenient," he seems again to hint that only a few saloons are needed in Atlanta, and this would seem to be another utterance in favor of high

The saving last above quoted shows that Mayor GLENN regards as fanatics some of the prohibitionists of Atlanta. Doubtless fanaticism plays its part on both sides whenever the question of prohibition is submitted to the popular vote for decision.

James River.

The Winehester News in noting the exhibit Richmond makes for 1888 per the Dispatch of the 1st of January says: "Now it Richmond would only go to work and scenre the deepening of the Jsmes she would be repaid the cost twice over before the completion of the work and ten times over in the next decade. The State needs a great city, and that is the best place for one." Richmond is doing all that is in her power in the direction indicated by the News, and James-river channel is being gradually deepened. But the great desideratum is that the appropriations for James river in the river and harbor hill should be large enough to legure continuous work until the improvement shall have been completed. If Con-

To remove as far as possible the difficulties to the execution of the plan of negro colonization, all quadroons and mulattoes abould be permitted to remain here, where they would naturally made among themselves, and in the course of time the law of nature would dispose of them as effectually as if deported. It is hard to say what this class now numbers as an integral part of the colored people-perhaps an eighth; and all the blacks over the age of sixty-4we should be left to spend their days here. These two items would be equal to one fourth of the entire population to be colonized.
